The 90-second start that changes everything

This month focuses on one core theme across four weeks. Each week builds on the last — read the science, apply the daily actions, track your progress.

Your 4 weeks at a glance

Week 5 The Cortisol Window

Week 6 Wake-Up Activation

Week 7 Fasted Movement

Week 8 Lock It In

Your daily non-negotiable: 3.4 minutes of vigorous movement, every day. Everything this month layers on top of that foundation.

Weeks 1 & 2

WEEK 5

The Cortisol Window

Cortisol peaks 30–45 min after waking. Pairing movement with this peak amplifies fat mobilisation and mental clarity by up to 20%.

- Mon–Tue: Move within 30 minutes of waking — even 60 seconds of jumping jacks.
  - Wed–Thu: No phone until after your morning burst. Movement first.
  - Fri–Sun: Note your energy level on days you move vs. days you don't.

WEEK 6

Wake-Up Activation

90 seconds of the right movements primes your nervous system, elevates BDNF, and sets a cognitive tone for the next 4 hours.

- Mon–Tue: 30 sec high knees → 30 sec push-ups → 30 sec squat jumps. Timed.
- Wed–Thu: Same sequence, but slower and controlled. Compare the feeling.
- Fri–Sun: Experiment with order. Which sequence leaves you most alert?

Weeks 3 & 4

WEEK 7

Fasted Movement

Moving before eating forces your body to use stored fuel first. 12-min fasted micro training elevates fat oxidation for hours after.

- Mon–Tue: Try your morning burst before breakfast. Note hunger and energy.
  - Wed–Thu: Move after a small coffee (black). Compare to fully fasted.
  - Fri–Sun: Settle on the approach that feels sustainable, not just optimal.

WEEK 8

Lock It In

A habit is automatic after roughly 66 repetitions. You're building yours now. The cue → routine → reward loop is the engineering behind lasting change.

- Mon–Fri: Same time, same trigger (alarm/coffee ready), same 90-sec routine.
- Sat: Skip it intentionally. Notice the pull to do it anyway — that's the habit forming.
- Sun: Reflect: what's your natural morning movement window?
